At CureSearch, we’re on a mission to make sure there are better, less-toxic treatments available for every child diagnosed with cancer. One way we do this is by funding high-potential research in all stages, bringing a unique continuum to children’s cancer research. We’re focused on helping families with the support they need after a cancer diagnosis, hosting events to bring together communities and driving impactful and accelerated children’s cancer research.

CureSearch has built a highly credible, instantly available variety of resources and tools for families affected by children’s cancer, including:

Ella, Friend of Barbie®

Through a partnership with Mattel, CureSearch for Children’s Cancer provides every young cancer fighter with an Ella Doll. Since Ella Dolls are bald, they are a great way to help children better understand hair loss that is common among cancer patients.

Educational Resources

Through our website, we provide expert-vetted cancer resources and educational videos that are accessed by more than one million people each year.

CancerCare Mobile App

The CancerCare mobile app allows parents and caregivers to organize treatment dates and medication schedules, track patient side effects and blood counts and so much more.
